Printers Row Lit Fest Is 30 Years Old

Saturday and Sunday
June 7th & 8th
2014

The Printers Row Lit Fest was founded in 1985 by the Near South Planning Board to attract visitors to the Printers Row neighborhood (once the city's book-making hub). By 2002, it had grown to five city blocks (on Dearborn, from Congress to Polk), attracting more than 200 booksellers from across the country displaying new, used and antiquarian books and featuring more than 200 authors participating in panels, discussions and a variety of other programs.

As part of its ongoing commitment to the written word and its support of literacy and literary endeavor, the Chicago Tribune purchased the Printers Row Book Fair in 2002 from the Near South Planning Board. Recently renamed to be the Printer's Row Lit Fest, it is considered the largest free outdoor literary event in the Midwest-drawing more than 150,000 book lovers to the two-day showcase.

British School Construction underway

McCaffery Interests, owner and current developer of Roosevelt Collection, has begun construction of the British School which is scheduled to be completed in time for the Fall term of 2015. Also, a high rise tower located at the Northwest Corner of the Roosevelt Collection is projected to break ground as early as this fall. This would be the first of three towers that have zoning approval and would contain 320 residences for the first one and 1100 units for the three buildings combined. As reported in Crain's Chicago Business.

OPINION

The views and opinions expressed in this newsletter are those of the contributors and do not necessarily reflect those of the editor or South Loop Referral Group.

8 things I never knew about the South Loop (and I thought I knew everything)

I thought I knew everything about the South Loop. But I found out yesterday that there are eight things I didn't know, whilst on a Forgotten Chicago tour--led by Jacob Kaplan and Patrick Steffes--of the neighborhood I've lived in just four months short of 20 years.

And here's the list:

1. In 1909, Bertha Palmer made a 198-year lease on a building she owned at 1301 S. Michigan; today that building houses the Nepal House restaurant.
2. The building at 1340 S. Michigan, which had a long life as the Cook County domestic violence courthouse, and which now houses a Giordano's and soon-to-be finished lofts, had an initial life in the 1920s as an aeronautics school, serving many African-Americans. Thus, the name of the newly renovated residential building: Aviation Lofts.
3. The building that used to stand on the southeast corner of Roosevelt and Michigan was once called the Town House Hotel and there was a Travelodge across the street and down the block closer to 13th Street. The Travelodge, built in 1964, was the last of the "Shoreline Motels" built in Chicago. The demolished Avenue Motel on the northwest corner of Roosevelt and Michigan hosted a secret meeting of Republicans in 1964, the purpose of which was to draft Barry Goldwater to run for president.
4. I knew all about the Illinois Central electrical substation a bit south of 16th Street on Prairie, but I didn't know it still provides electricity (we could hear the hum) or that it was designed by famous architect (and Frank Lloyd Wright employee) of such structures, Hermann von Holst.
5. I also had no idea that the mid-century industrial building just a tad south of the substation was originally built for Eastman Kodak.
6. The industrial structure right across from the westernmost building of McCormick Place at 23rd and Indiana was once a Cadillac service and parts center.
7. The Ford dealership at 24th and Michigan (the last of the automobile dealerships to close on Chicago's Motor Row) will be moving north to Elston Avenue some time soon. (I thought it was simply going out of business.) And speaking of car dealerships, I learned there has been talk of three vintage long-shuttered historic dealerships (including an earlier Ford) a couple of blocks north being demolished to make room for the McPier/Depaul redevelopment plan in the area. Hello, Chicago preservationists!!!!!!!!!!!!!! Where are you??????????????

The Forgotten Chicago Tour Group at Cullerton and Prairie

8. The abandoned but very kitschy "Tiki Room" on 24th Street, a little west of Michigan, was originally a lamp factory.

Once our group crossed the expressway, and continued the tour, albeit officially out of the South Loop, I still learned four things I never knew. Like the news that the original building on the IIT campus, which was called the Armour Institute, was shaken during the Red Line re-vamp last year and had to be evacuated. And it's still evacuated without plans for the future. Again, preservationists!!!!!!!!!! Where are you?????????

I also found out that a very classy Studebaker Auto dealership once stood in what is now the southwest corner of Mercy Hospital and Medical Center at 2525 S. Michigan.

And that the same architect who built the glassy, classy residential complex several years back at 31st and Michigan also built the glassy, classy buildings that I have often found somewhat interesting in downtown Evanston.

Last but not least, the architect who built the mid-century industrial building at 25th and Wabash--made of limestone and granite--built himself a home that looked somewhat similar on the 1400 block of North Astor Street.

New Books by South Loop Authors

By Ellen Sandmeyer

With the Printers Row Lit Fest coming up June 7 & 8, it is a good time to note some new books by South Loop authors.

Printers Row resident Anne Ream's latest book is Lived Through This: Listening to the Stories of Sexual Violence Survivors (Beacon Press 2014). Ream is the founder of The Voices and Faces Project and cofounder of Stories We Tell, North America's first testimonial writing program for survivors of sexual violence, domestic violence, and trafficking. She will participate in a panel at the Lit Fest.

Bette Cerf Hill, founder of the Printers Row Book Fair, South Loop pioneer, artist and writer has recently published a collection of her poems, The Poetry Tent. Bette has fond memories of the Poetry Tent in those early days, and says that the metaphor of a poetry tent speaks to her wish to include everyone in her passion for finding beauty everywhere.

And speaking of South Loop pioneers . . . this year's poster is the work of artist and writer Tony Fitzpatrick who celebrated the releases of two of his early books of poetry at Sandmeyer's, when he was our neighbor. You can see his writing and art in every issue of NewCity, the free Chicago arts newspaper published by Jan and Brian Hiegelke in Printers Row.

Raymond Wlodkowski, of Printers Row, has published Motor City Boys, a novel of adolescent boys coming of age in Detroit.

Long time South Looper John Ardizzone has contributed an essay to Why We Walked Away: Twelve Former Priests Tell Their Stories.

Patricia Grace King's most recent story Small Country is available only as a Kindle single, but her award winning chapbooks The Death of Carrie Bradshaw and Rubia are available at Sandmeyer's.

South Loop poet John Wilkinson will be reading from his work on Saturday morning at the Lit Fest. Watch for his new book Schedule of Unrest coming in September.

Check out the website of the PRLF for the full list of participants and schedule of events.

Safe & Sound Blog

by Beth Finke

<http://Bethfinke.wordsmith.com>

Ten years ago the City of Chicago's Commissioner on Aging contacted me to lead a memoir class at the Chicago Cultural Center. Soon afterward, Chicago Public Radio asked if I'd write and record an essay about the writers who'd signed up. I used my talking computer to e-mail my rough draft to the WBEZ editor and she emailed back with only one suggestion. "You repeat the word 'seniors' too much," she said, requesting I use a "gentler" word. When I couldn't come up with one, she wrote back. "How about golden agers?"

Golden agers? Was she serious?

She was. My recording of the piece is not available online, but I have a CD of it, and if you listen very closely you can hear me choke every time I call the writers "golden agers."

Turns out the editor was ahead of her time. Just this week on Morning Edition, NPR's Ina Jaffe opened a series she is doing about older Americans by explaining how difficult it's been for her to find the right words to describe people who are over age 65.

"I realized what a minefield this was after I'd been on the beat just a few months," she said, describing a profile she'd done recently of a 71-year-old midwife who is still up all night delivering babies. The headline on the NPR web site used the word "elderly" to describe the midwife. "Listeners were furious," Jaffe said. "Maybe once upon a time, 'elderly' referred to a particular stage in life, but now people think ... it means you're ailing and you're frail." Jaffe said she sometimes uses the words older adults or older Americans but has pretty much given up senior. "I've met some older people who don't like that, either," she said. "And 'senior citizen' really seems to annoy just about everyone now...there really aren't a lot of widely acceptable terms anymore."

The piece went on and on, and on and on and on, with all sorts of other ideas:

- Golden years: Jaffe explained this term came from a sales pitch during the late 1950s, when retirement began to be romanticized as a perpetual vacation.
- Silver tsunami: I'd never heard of this, but NPR actually referenced a guy named Ashton Applewhite about this one. Applewhite blogs about aging and ageism and argues the metaphor is wrong. The 65-and-over population growth is not a tsunami, he says. "It's a phenomenon that is washing gently across a flood plain."

- Our seniors: A term often used by politicians. Jaffe finds it patronizing. "The only other group we talk about like that is children."
- Successful aging: Jaffe is over 65 years old herself and says that although this is considered a progressive term, she doesn't like it. "I think it just means there's one more opportunity for me to fail."

I do not research ageism, and I don't have a degree in aging. I do lead three memoir-writing classes a week, though, and while a couple of my students are still in their fifties, most are in their seventies. Two students, Wanda and Hanna, are in their nineties and still manage to get to class on their own each week with new essays to share. Listening to all these amazing people read their essays teaches me a lot -- far more than any of them will ever learn from me!

So what word to use to describe the people who sign up for my memoir-writing classes? That's easy. Just call them writers.

That's writer Hanna Bratman, 94, the matriarch of the memoir classes I lead. Her essays have been compiled in a book called "What's In My Head." (Photo by Nora Isabel Bratman)

Beth Finke's books: "Safe and Sound" and "Long Time No See" can be purchased at Sandmeyer's Book Store.

This park and Printers Row Park are maintained by volunteers. Contact: parkpals@southloopneighbors.org if you are interested in joining this fun group.

Jennifer Nieves, a resident of 901 S. Plymouth Court, takes her car to a car wash on South State Street. When she arrives, she sees Derrick Rose. It's not clear who wanted an autograph from whom. However, congrats to Jennifer for getting a "Selfie."

Environmental Action Opportunity

Sierra Club is inviting you - and everyone else who cares about environmental health - to participate in a rally on Monday, June 2, 10AM-11AM in support of Obama's planned announcement regarding curtailing power plant emissions. The event will be at Spertus Institute, 610 S. Michigan.

Power plants are responsible for some 40 percent of the nation's carbon dioxide emissions, and coal burning accounts for three-quarters of that total, according to figures from the federal Energy Information Administration. more info is out there, here is a link to one.

In a slightly surprising move, Porkchop will apparently open up shop at 555 S. Dearborn (the old spot where Pockets was):

Perhaps it was the fake out we had a few months when Smoque turned out not to be a BBQ joint, but it looks like printers row is getting a place for ribs! Taking over the old Pockets location. An interesting companion to their upcoming Roosevelt collection. The awning is already up!

Why is this surprising you may ask? Well word just came out in April that they were going to open a South Loop location at Roosevelt Collection.

It now has been confirmed. There will be two stores, one on Dearborn and one in Roosevelt Collection.

Sat June 7...SLN YARDSALE!!

It's that time again, clean out the old (make room for the new?). And speaking of new, there seems to be a bit of confusion around our new policy this year. Since we've started charging $20 to Non-Members sellers to participate, someone inquired about this as a "Charge for the Table", thinking SLN was supplying tables this year. Not sure how this came to be, but let's nip it in the bud now. Here is everything you need to know about participating in this year's Yardsale:

Contact Sandi Thayer
at Sandi@southloopneighbors.org

Saturday June 7, 8 am – 3 pm At Dearborn Park

Member sellers – NO CHARGE, Non-Members sellers – $20

Bring your own tables, blankets, or anything else you need to display your wares.

Once again, SLN has started charging NON-members sellers to participate in the event to offset the costs we incur for the permits and insurance which is several hundred dollars paid to the city.

HISTORIC HOUSE TOUR TO FEATURE LAND-MARK REES HOUSE BEFORE IT IS MOVED TO MAKE WAY FOR NEW DEPAUL ARENA

Glessner House Museum, 1800 S. Prairie Avenue, Chicago, will present its annual house tour of the Prairie Avenue Historic District entitled "A Walk Through Time" on Sunday June 8, 2014 from 1:00 to 4:00pm. The tour will feature the interior of six private homes constructed between 1868 and 1894; an 1870 mansion now serving as a boutique hotel; the Glessner and Clarke house museums; and historic Second Presbyterian Church with its large collection of Tiffany windows. Tickets are $50.00 per person and may be purchased in advance or at the door. For reservations, please call 312-326-1480, or visit www.glessnerhouse.org for further information.

This very special tour presents attendees with the rare opportunity to see the interiors of several mansions built in the late 19th century on what was then known as the "sunny street of the sifted few." These homes feature a breath-taking array of beautifully carved wood moldings, leaded glass windows, and fireplaces faced in elaborate tile, mosaic, and marble. A special bonus of the tour will be the last opportunity to tour the landmark Harriet Rees house (1888, Cobb & Frost, architects) before it is moved later this summer to make way for the new DePaul Arena north of McCormick Place.

Saturday June 7, 8 am—3pm at Dearborn Park.

South Loop Referral Group is a professional organization, made up of individuals with a high level of skill and passion for serving their community. The members all live and work in the south loop area: which means they are well known locally with many resources and testimonials. A referral group's goal is to have only one representative from each category. The quality of their work and the care they provide makes them truly unique, and whether you are looking for a printer, a banker or a contractor, you can be sure whomever you hire from our group, will be attentive, on time, and competitively priced.

The group also serves as a rainmaker, encouraging local business development and supporting a thriving professional community in Chicago's South Loop neighborhood through motivation, communication, and education.

Police Blotter

Spit take

While a man was waiting for the elevator in his apartment building Feb. 16 on the 600 block of South Dearborn Street, his neighbor spit on him twice from behind and said, "you will get what's coming." The victim did not press charges but asked police to tell his neighbor to stay away from him because he felt threatened.

Spine-tingling

The manager of Best Western, 1100 S. Michigan Ave., told police he has been receiving threatening phone calls from a 59-year-old man who was arrested Feb. 28 when he brought a fake rifle to the hotel and told the desk attendant he was going to rip out the manager's spine and make his employee eat it.

ATM-ectomy

A man reported March 11 that while walking along Congress Parkway, a passerby pulled a gun from his pocket and pointed it at his neck. He demanded $20 from the ATM inside the CVS Pharmacy, 520 S. State St. The assailant followed the man into the CVS and fled after receiving the money. Police have not been able to locate him.

Marital mayhem

A man wrote several letters to the Chicago Police Department stating that his wife was brainwashed and he feared she could be a threat to their children's safety. On March 17, police visited her home on the 900 block of South Michigan Avenue and the woman explained she has a restraining order against her husband.

Fahrenheit 900

A fire broke out on the 600 block of South Dearborn Street when a 50-year-old woman set her oven to the automatic cleaning setting for too long. The temperature was so hot that it burned the plastic containers in the bottom oven drawer. Firefighters extinguished the fire but had to forcibly remove the oven door.

Park snark

A woman from the 900 block of South State Street denied her daughter permission to take her grandchild to the park on April 2. In response, her daughter pushed her down and left with the child. Police later found the two at a nearby park. The grandmother told police she is the child's legal guardian and filed a complaint against her daughter.

We always strive to produce excellence in our work and with the industry changing the consumer is asking for more. Real Estate agencies need to strive to educate and direct their associates to learn all the new levels of training and gain experience that goes beyond normal licensing requirements. In today's market place the basic license is no longer all that is needed. Realtors need to rise above the standards set in previous years.

We are looking for relationships that last. Our office has had the privilege of serving the same community for over 3 generations, throughout the U.S. as people moved they still call to get info on new locations and assistance for their family members or work associates. Keeping strong and staying with the future trends makes transitions easier. Being a name people can trust and staying in they location they are used to finding you is key. Changing names, locations and staff may be needed but the root is how you conduct your business, if you don't adapt to the correct attitude, having a new name or look won't last long. The same old problems will resurface, your ethical foundation is everything. Look for longevity and after serving many years their still there and flourishing something must be going right.

Most buyers and renters want to be pre-approved for their rental or purchase. Homeowners want to see that approval too. Make sure the office your working with has the same valuable credentials. Calling on a lifetime of experience is opening a bag of accumulated wisdom, trials and error's, success. Castle Keeper's will be celebrating 40yr's of service in January 2015 and as the original owner and managing Broker I hope we never stop accumulating wisdom, my personal numbers are available to receive any client concerns and a call or email is returned within 2-3 hours of receipt. Expediency is very important in this age of multitasking. The quicker a problem can be solved the faster we can proceed. The availability of owners/brokers is important and the reply time is essential to maintaining success. Waiting hours or days for a call back reflects on your business and speaking to a person of authority gives results and peace of mind. Before listing or engaging a Realtor see how quickly your call is answered and how accurately answered.
