Retail space at AMLI lofts at the corner of Clark and Polk (via loopnet)

Posted Monday, Jan. 19, 2015

Burger Bar Opening Thursday; Owner Confirms Two Other South Loop Projects at 800 S. Clark

Last week we posted that Burger Bar at 1160 S. Michigan was going to open in the next couple of weeks. Well apparently it's opening this week, on Thursday (1/22), according to an article in Chicago Magazine. While this is great and all, what might be even more interesting is that it sounds like the brains behind the operation is excited about the Sloop and opening two more spots in the hood:

Hot on the hooves of the second Burger Bar, McLean is targeting a July 1 opening for an unnamed pair of projects at 800 South Clark Street, a coffee shop and a Mediterranean small-plates spot. The 15- to 20-seat coffee shop will make its own doughnuts and pastries and serve panini and salads at lunch. Inspired by a recent trip to Barcelona, McLean plans the wood-fired Spanish flatbreads called cocas, wood-roasted meats, plancha-cooked prawns and razor clams, and paella at the 125-seat Mediterranean restaurant. "It will be really robust food," he says.

For those not familiar with the space at 800 S. Clark street we presume it's the retail space at the recently completed and opened <http://www.sloopin.com/> AMLI lofts. :

The Obama Library: the South Loop has the perfect solution

Posted 1/26/15

So many people are up in arms over snatching Chicago Park District land for the proposed Obama Library--post Obama presidency.

And they've got a point. With all the empty fallow land in this city, why upset South Side park-users?

Yes, the library would probably be very pretty and dramatic placed on about five acres of a 20-plus acre piece of park land in Jackson or Washington Park. But it's really not fair to the residents of the area who don't want it.

And is there really any significant competition for the Library from Hawaii or New York--enough to bust up historic Chicago Park District land--when Obama's Chicago pals are making the decision? I think they may be thinking not of those other states, but rather their Chicago pals/pols who own Hyde Park parcels and stand to make a fortune if the library gets the people's park land as a donation. Yes, the same parcel-holders who got jilted and disappointed by the Olympic Committee when the Chicago Olympic bid fell through--the bid that included lots of Olympic-mania destined for the same area, including a Washington Park Olympic Stadium.

But I digress--and while I'm on the subject of empty fallow land, I have a good idea.

How about the Obama Library being built on a big portion of that 62-acre, never before developed plot of land in the South Loop on the southwest corner of Clark and Roosevelt? The land that used to belong to the infamous Tony Rezko, the shady political and financial dealmaker who currently resides in the clink.

The land is perfect. Close to downtown. Good public transportation. Plenty of acreage for parking. Nice vistas. It has positively everything the builders of a presidential library could want. Including no history. Other than natural history--which includes, among other things, lots of foliage and packs of coyotes.

The neighborhood would love it. We have plenty of shopping now in that same area around Roosevelt and Clark. Plenty. So why not expand our cultural-political fortunes with a brand new Obama Presidential Library?

With 62 acres of virgin land to work with, the sky's the limit. The grounds could include not only a library but other cultural, recreational and very notable spots.

Like that other proposed and very controversial scourge that aims to steal public land for the purpose: The Lucas Museum of Narrative Art.

Darth Vader meets Barack Obama?

As stated, the land at Roosevelt and Clark is virgin, never used, never developed, never had a history of people. What better spot for a true blue Chicago meeting of the forces of good and evil?

Planning for Long-Term Care for Dummies by Wiley Brand

Not your normal book review perhaps, however, it is of vital importance as we age to understand our options. I purchased it with the hope that it could illuminate Long Term Care Insurance for me. Only one of the chapters dealt with that, however, it was worth the cost of the book. This is a reference book, not a book that you read cover to cover. The chapters that attracted my attention were chapters 11 Paying for Care: Long-Term Care Insurance and Other Options (what are the costs? Is it worth it?); Chapter 15, Understanding the Role of Nursing Homes in Long Term Care and Chapter 16, Moving Toward Advance Care Planning (making wishes known with advance directives; choosing a healthcare proxy).

There are 21 chapters in the book providing lots of information and suggested resources. One chapter, chapter 20, is titled:

Ten Myths about Aging and Long Term Care.

1. Serious Memory Lapses Are Normal in Older Adults
2. Older People Fall: Not Much You Can Do about it
3. All Over-the-counter Drugs Are Safe
4. Americans Dump Their Older Relatives in Nursing Homes
5. Medicare Pays for All Long-Term Care
6. Hospice Is Just a Place Where People Go to Die
7. Millionaires Take Advantage of Medicaid
8. Long-Term Care Means a Nursing Home
9. Assisted-Living Facilities Are Regulated Like Nursing Homes
10. Long-Term Care Insurance Covers All Your Needs

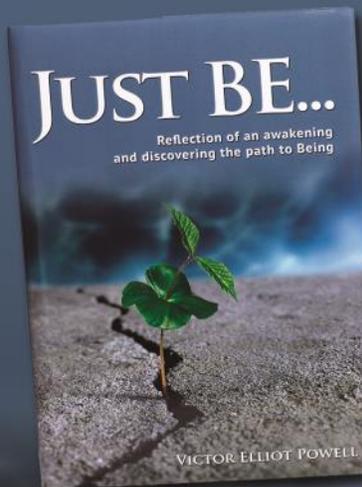

As far as the cost of Long Term Care Insurance, it really depends on your situation, however, if it exceeds 7% of your income, it may not be worth it.

Did you catch me on TV last night?

Last night a news show on public television called Chicago Tonight ran a feature about "The Village Movement: How Elders are Aging in Place." If you link to it here and look very closely, you'll see footage of me at the beginning of the segment.

The back story: I lead three memoir-writing classes in Chicago each week. Two of them are sponsored by Lincoln Park Village, which is one of many "virtual villages" across the country. From the Chicago Tonight web site:

Folks over age 60 are opting to stay in their homes and communities well into their golden years. A collection of virtual villages are popping up all over the country, providing engagement, services, and a new way of looking at how we age.

Lincoln Park Village here in Chicago boasts over 400 members, and its classes -- everything from meditation to film studies to my memoir class -- meet in people's homes. Chicago Tonight knew they'd need to show some background video while interviewing experts about the "Village Movement," so they showed up at our memoir-writing class yesterday to get some footage.

For the class starting on February 5, all Whitney needs to do is get me across the street.

Recognizing that interest in memoir-writing for seniors is growing along with the population, and knowing that seniors here in Chicago are on waiting lists to get into classes, I decided to start another one right here in our Printer's Row neighborhood:

Easy writing exercises will help writers age 60 and older tell their stories of childhood, adventure, life's losses and triumphs. The classes open to seniors at all levels -- from those who would simply like to start keeping personal journals to those interested in writing a full-fledged memoir.

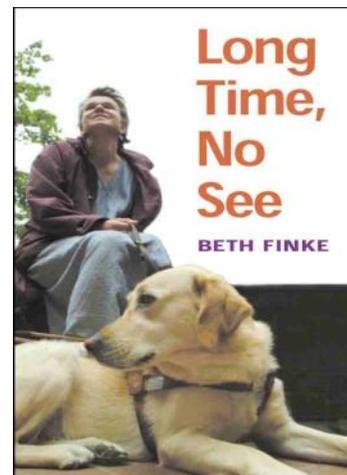

The course will meet in the Sanctuary at Grace Place, 637 S. Dearborn on Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. on February 5, February 12, February 26, March 5, March 12 and March 19 (note: no class on Thursday, February 19) The fee is $60, and space is limited, so sign up soon. You can use a credit card to register and pay online, and if you'd like to register using a check, no problem. Just email me at info@bethfinke.com for more information.

Writers do not have to live in our neighborhood to join this new class -- we're pretty close to all sorts of public transportation -- and you don't have to be a member of Lincoln Park Village or Renaissance Court to attend this one, either. If you live in the Chicago area, consider joining me for this new class -- I'd love to hear your stories.

Beth Finke's books: "Safe and Sound" and "Long Time No See" can be purchased at Sandmeyer's Book Store.

Happy New Year. When I first wrote you in 2013, it was to announce that an investment group had invested in the Metropolitan Bank Group family of banks and to introduce myself as the new President & CEO. I shared that we were consolidating all of our banks under one banking charter, North Community Bank. I trust that you have seen a number of positive changes in our bank since 2013, most recently with the launch of our Mobile Banking product and an enhanced online banking experience.

Today I am writing with more exciting news: we are launching a new brand name for our entire bank group and all 91 convenient locations. In February 2015, we will officially change our name to Byline Bank™.

‘Byline’ means authorship. For us, it means putting our name behind everything we do and working hard to help you, our customers, write your own story.

Byline Bank knows Chicago. We know our neighborhoods. As Byline Bank, we are committed to:

- Earn your business, everyday
- Roll up our sleeves to get you what you need
- Make it personal – listen to what matters to you
- Focus on you, not our process
- Not take ourselves too seriously
- Always do what we promise

The name Byline might be new but our roots have been in Chicago for over 100 years. We will reflect the work ethic of the makers, builders and doers that make this city great. That means we will always work harder than the other guys and we won’t stop until we make Chicago an even better place to live and work.

What this means for you. In essence, more resources and better products along with the same great people you know and trust continuing to provide the highest level of service. You will see new signs in front of our buildings but will recognize the familiar faces you know inside the branch. Your account number will not change, and you can continue to use your current checks, debit card and online banking account.

We will communicate with you about upcoming events related to our brand launch via letters, email and on our website. Look for updates by mail and please check in at www.northcommunitybank.com for further news.

We are glad you are with us and excited for what is to come.

Alberto Paracchini
President & Chief Executive Officer

Same People. New Name.

On February 17, 2015,
North Community Bank’s name
will officially change to Byline Bank.

What this means.

New Bank Website: Our new website will be bylinebank.com. The northcommunitybank.com website will automatically direct you to the new site where you can log into your current online banking account or find branch location information.

Branch Signage: You will start to see new Byline Bank signs in front of our branches, but you will recognize the faces you see inside the branch.

Statements: You will start to see the Byline Bank name and logo on your statements at the end of February 2015.

Debit Cards: You will receive new Byline Bank debit cards by June 2015. You may continue to use your current debit card until that time.

What’s staying the same.

Account Number: Your current account number will not change. You may continue to use your current checks until you need to order a new supply.

Online Banking: Your online banking account will remain the same and you may continue to use your current login credentials. Once you log in, you will see the Byline Bank name.

Routing Number: Our routing number will not change. Your direct deposit, automatic payments and other transactions will continue as they are today.

And most importantly the same people, products and service you have come to know and trust!

Opening Reception - The Moments Between: New Work by Rafael E. Vera

THURSDAY, JANUARY 29 AT 5:00PM TO 7:00PM

AVERILL AND BERNARD LEVITON A+D GALLERY 619 S. WABASH, CHICAGO

In The Moments Between, Vera's new sculptures utilize building materials and domestic objects, which revel in a state of in-between-ness and occupy ambiguous space relative to production and consumption. Fabricating his palettes, furniture and other objects entirely from scratch and combined with brand new pillows, cinder blocks or pallet trucks, these materials are sourced for artistic purposes alone. Soft surfaces meet hard edges where lightness and weight collude in works characterized as much by finesse as they are by heavy lifting. In this way, each sculpture is a proposal.

To provide discursive context for Vera's practice, curator Jessica Cochran integrates into the exhibition additional works from Vera's archive and by other artists, including: Jessica Bardsley, Jaclyn Jacunski, Kirsten Leenaars, and Sonja Thomsen.

Driven to Drink: Motor Row Brewing Revs Up in Historic District By Ben Kramer

In recent months, the Near South side has been dominated by sports headlines like "Sox Land Melky Cabrera" and "Jay Cutler Benched. Will He Be Traded?"

In the midst of these triumphs and tragedies, Motor Row Brewing (2337 South Michigan) has been quietly working its way toward January 14th, its opening day.

Owner/brewer Frank Lassandrello has been involved in the industry for more than a decade. Graduating from Seibel Institute of Technology, America's oldest brewing school, Lassandrello worked at Goose Island before moving to Milwaukee's Lakefront Brewery to become their Quality Control Manager. As Lassandrello explains, "You can't make good beer if your tank's not clean."

Perfectionism and an eye for detail landed Lassandrello a judging position at the Great American Beer Festival in 2009. "When I was judging," he remembers, "it was apparent to me that I really wanted to be able to do my own thing. It was great representing another brewery, but you get this feeling, this certain sense of pride that goes with creating your own recipe and following through with it."

Second Anniversary

This is the beginning of our third year publishing the Dearborn Express News Letter. We have distributed 33 issues in two years. When the Chicago Journal stopped publication in our area, we started to discuss ways to fill the void of local news. We also wanted to support local businesses and organizations. We decided to keep it simple and to develop a newsletter that would serve a small succinct area of Printers Row and Dearborn Park. It is sponsored by the South Loop Referral Group and is strictly non-profit. We don't charge for anything. It is distributed through individual subscriptions and through property managers of residential buildings who, in turn, distribute it to their residents.

I would like to thank those who contribute to the Dearborn Express, especially Bonnie McGrath, Beth Finke, Brian Hieggelke, editor of NEW CITY, Bonnie Muir real estate column, and a number of news and blog sites that provide added enrichment with direct links. And to those property managers who distribute to their residents.

Bonnie Muir Owner Broker
Castle Keepers Realty
729 S Dearborn St. Chicago
60605 312- 753-5106

Open House:

Most sellers want their broker to do open houses for them to sell their property.

They can be productive but there should be some guidelines:

- 1 Homeowner should be present, if not then ample representatives from listing company should be there if property is furnished and owners belongings are there.
2. All personal items should be stored away
3. Any money in pockets in closets should be removed by owner prior to open house.
4. Bathroom should be checked that no jewelry or small items are out that can be put in a purse or pocket.
5. If more than one person arrives to look around they should be escorted, if they are asking to use bathroom, make sure they are directed to the one for guest use.
6. In cold weather buyers show up with heavy coats and sometimes wet or bulky shoes.. Have coat rack at front door or in hall and booties to slip on so carpets or flooring is not soiled.
7. If buyers show up with small children, its not impolite to ask adults to hold their child's hand as they tour unit and children may reach or grasp at a owners item . Sometimes the little ones have sweaty hands from wearing gloves and if they touch freshly painted walls you have a problem.

Make sure flyers about the property are near front door with a sign in book. A greeter from the real estate company should be at the front door through hours of the open house. Never leave front door unattended. If your offering cookies or water/coffee, have someone available to pass them out. and ample containers for the used cup or plates. Later, keep track of bathrooms and after a prospective buyer has used one, just recheck if everything in place - sink cleaned and toilets flushed. Try to stagger agents throughout the rooms of the house so each area is being supervised but not in a overbearing way. Like wandering through an art gallery, someone should be there but not disturbing your focus. The main objective is to get offers on the house or condo..

Never let people roam about in bedrooms where they can go through closets or drawers unwatched.

Believe it or not, many robbers have shown up as prospective buyers in open house settings. It's an easy way to get one person to distract the broker, while their partner or child wander off to look on their own.

Seeing a drivers license and taking down address, license number and contact info is essential. Many people will give a phony name or contact info if they don't want follow up calls or are up to something suspicious, And, if something is missing, you have no valid info on who went through.

The average homebuyer is happy to see the seller is protected and prospective buyers should not complain to see that they are escorted or to show a valid ID. They want to have someone there to answer questions and give details, if not, they are probably not buyers after all.

In this world we now live in, we must be more and more careful to qualify and stay safe. If a lone woman agent allows strangers into the house, it could be a recipe for disaster. Just a reminder to be better safe than sorry. I may be sounding a large alarm, but there are more and more recorded incidents of these occurrences and they have happened more than you may believe. After 40 years of real estate leadership, I attempt to educate all my agents to be careful. Do open houses for sure but keep safe and be aware.
